

eAWB

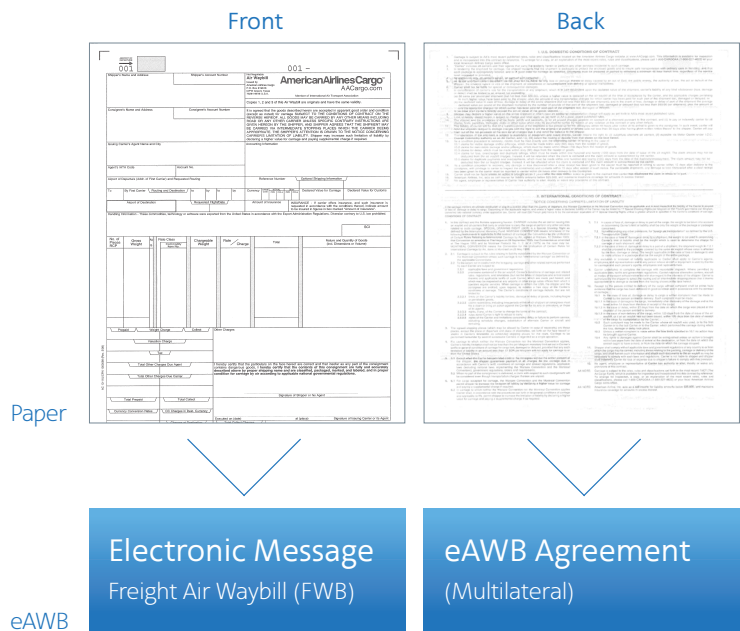

From paper to pixels.

It's the same Air Waybill you already use – and so much more.

What is an eAWB?

An electronic Air Waybill (eAWB) is an online version of the printed Master Air Waybill (MAWB). There is an industry-wide initiative to go paperless by using electronic communications. And as your shipping partner, we're here to help. So rest easy – eAWBs work the same as traditional Air Waybills, but with the added accessibility and flexibility of being online.

Why switch?

- Why not? It's the same information you already provide in the paper MAWB.
- More accuracy. Electronic Air Waybill data comes directly from you, the shipper.
- More simplicity. Make last-minute adjustments and changes to your shipment in real time.
- More opportunities. Streamlines regulatory compliance by pre-sending information to those who need it.
- More green. eAWBs are environmentally friendly and reduce our carbon footprint.
- More peace of mind. Unlike a paper MAWB, there is no chance of losing or misplacing it.

Get started with this easy-to-use checklist.

Electronic Air Waybills (eAWBs) make shipping simpler, safer and more efficient. This useful checklist will help you every step of the way.

Before you begin.

✓ Can your internal operations function efficiently without a paper Master Airway Bill (MAWB)?

If yes, eAWBs will work for you.

✓ Have you signed the International Air Transport Association (IATA) Multilateral eAWB Agreement?

Doing so allows you to transfer cargo without the printed conditions of contract on the paper MAWB.

✓ Can you send a Freight Air Waybill (FWB) message?

If so, your system supports eAWBs.

➔ Go to iata.org to sign the agreement.

That's it. You can notify your American Airlines Cargo Account Manager that you are ready to utilize eAWBs.

What to expect after you sign up.

We'll validate and confirm that we are receiving fully qualified FWBs from your system.
